Dear Friends, Musicians, Educators, and Supporters,

I wish I could be there with you all to take part in what I know will be a wonderful celebration, and to experience the inspiring work being done to make music accessible, inclusive, and a true expression of community across British Columbia.

Though I cannot be with you in person, I am pleased to send my warmest greetings as you gather for what promises to be an extraordinary 7th annual Day of Music.

This celebration is a reminder of music's unique ability to bring people together, inspire creativity, and strengthen the bonds within our communities. Through performances, learning opportunities, and shared experiences, it is uplifting to see these spaces where people of all ages and backgrounds can connect through the universal language of music.

I would like to commend the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra and the VSO School of Music for your continued leadership, vision, and commitment to making the arts accessible and meaningful for communities across our province. The impact of this work reaches far beyond the stage and leaves a lasting impression on countless individuals and families.

Please accept my sincere congratulations on this year's event, along with my best wishes for a joyful, memorable, and inspiring Day of Music for all who are taking part.

Warm regards,

Jonathan Wilkinson
